Look on my Works...

I met a traveller from an antique land,
Who said - "Two vast and trunkless legs of stone
Stand in the desert... Near them, on the sand,
Half sunk a shattered visage lies, whose frown,
And wrinkled lip, and sneer of cold command,
Tell that its sculptor well those passions read
Which yet survive, stamped on these lifeless things,
The hand that mocked them, and the heart that fed;
And on the pedestal, these words appear:
My name is Ozymandias, King of Kings;
Look on my Works, ye Mighty, and despair!
Nothing beside remains. Round the decay
Of that colossal Wreck, boundless and bare
The lone and level sands stretch far away."

Percy Bysshe Shelley

National monuments worldwide suffered the same humiliating treatment in this symbolic show of subservience to Zionist power, influence and control.

KEEP ON KEEPING ON...

For some racial nationalists 2024 will be very much dominated by elections. Local and General.

Local elections will or will not be on 2 May depending on where you live in the UK. (Check your own area).

General Election. That must be called in the next 11 months by the serving Prime Minister. The latest a Parliament can be dissolved for a general election is on the fifth anniversary of the first day it met. That takes us to 17 December 2024. 25 working days are then allowed to prepare for the election. Really it could be called by the PM anytime they see a slight advantage for their party. Always party before Folk & Nation!

Candour will support true racial nationalist candidates where they stand. The "Civics", who denounce racism, are a deliberate distraction and fake pressure valve for the State. Any pro-Israeli/Zionist sentiments will be called-out in Candour.

Beware of, and standby to put in their place, the boarders who are already heading our way The failed UKIPer's, washed up Tories, REFORMer's et al. They can work their way in, long term, but I will not listen to their bleating in the meanwhile.

You and I know that elections are not the be-all and end-all of our struggle. They are only a part.

The Candour priority will as always be publishing and education. Back us as much as you can. Maybe I'll meet you in 2024. I hope so and am looking forward to an interesting year!

Once this issue is finally in the post to you, our subscribers worldwide, my priority will be the book East London Rights for Whites 1990-94.

In the build up to Remembrance Sunday in London last November 12th a totally false narrative was created by those supportive of the Zionist entity. Very alarmed by the massive size of the pro-Palestine, anti-Israel marches and demonstrations taking place, by then weekly, the Zionists, you do not have to be a Jew to be a Zionist (See box at bottom of column 1 left), mobilized their mini-Golems into anti-Palestinian and pro-Israel activity. The MSM spread the lie that somehow a massive pro-Palestinan march on the Saturday, the 11th, and not going near the Cenotaph would disrupt events on Remembrance Sunday the 12th.

Result 100 + 'patriots' arrested. (I am reminded of C18...)

O little town of Bethlehem,
How still we see thee lie!
Above thy deep and dreamless sleep

Yet in thy dark streets shineth
The everlasting Light;
The hopes and fears of all the years
Are met in thee to-night.

Towering walls and militarized fences now encircle Bethlehem, turning the 4,000 year old city into a virtual prison for its Palestinian Christian and Muslim inhabitants. Bethlehem now has only three gates to the outside world, all tightly controlled by Israeli occupation forces.

The parasite State, parasitic on the nation of Palestine, that is Israel has confiscated almost all of the agricultural land in the area for illegal settlements, making it impossible for many Palestinian farmers to continue tending their land. Outside the town, the fields where shepherds once watched their flocks are being filled by brutalist Israeli housing blocks and roads barred to the descendants of those shepherds.

Bethlehem's residents increasingly are fleeing Israel's confining walls, and soon the city, home to the oldest Christian community in the world, will have little left of its Christian history but the cold stones of empty churches.

Then the Jews will continue, openly, with their work on the Third Temple and that is when the trouble will really begin...

ZIONIST CRIMES AGAINST BRITONS!

The low level plastic gangsters and their football hooligan type followers reluctantly, but necessarily, mentioned in column 2 page 2 unfortunately do suck some genuine and well meaning patriots into their warped orbit. If you come across any of the Zionist dupes you could inform them of the British servicemen and other servants of the Crown, murdered or maimed in Palestine, and in the UK, by agents of the Haganah, the Irgun and the Stern Gang between 1945 and 1948 (when Palestine was a British Mandate).

Their atrocities included:

The sadistic hanging - by piano wire - of two 20 year old British Army Sergeants, Mervyn Paice and Clifford Martin, in Netanya, Palestine, on 31 July 1947;

The bombing of the King David Hotel, Jerusalem, Palestine, which resulted in almost 100 deaths, both military and civilian, British and Arab, on 22 July 1946;

The assassination of Rex Farran - mistaken for his brother Roy Farran, a high-ranking and distinguished SAS anti-terrorism specialist - by a letter bomb to the family home at Codsall, Staffordshire, England in May 1948.

The bombing of the British Colonial Club in Trafalgar Square, Central London, on 7 March 1947, which left many injured and maimed.

I am not forgetting the countless horrific crimes committed by the same butchers against the Palestinian people over the decades such as the dreadful massacre of more than 100 Palestinian men, women and children at Dier Yassin on 9 April 1948.

The photo below was taken in 1991 when your Editor, Colin Todd, was on a ten day or so tour as a guest of both the PLO and the Iraqi government of President Saddam Hussein.

Here I am at a Palestinian refugee camp on the West Bank behind the young man on the right in the red shirt. Not looking at the camera I was probably trying to breath again after an ill-advised footie kick about with the kids in ridiculous heat. The two ladies on the left are PLO officials.

Next stop was Baghdad. What has become of them all?

ZIONIST PLOT TO TAKE AWAY OUR FREEDOMS

patrioticalternative.org.uk

Mark, as did Candour, correctly predicted that trouble was being stirred by the Zionists and that resulted in the totally unnecessary arrests of misguided patriots, some one hundred I believe, at and around the Cenotaph in London on Remembrance Sunday November 12th.

As pro-Palestinian demonstrations grow all over the West in response to Israeli war crimes in Gaza, Zionists are calling for new laws aimed at curtailing the right to protest. Yet curiously, despite Zionists supporting mass immigration and multiculturalism, they are now trying to stir up racial sentiment amongst conservative Whites in order to achieve their aims. But beware; if new laws are passed, those laws will end up stripping every one of their rights – including those who speak out against demographic change. Don't be fooled into campaigning for your own rights to be taken away!

Since the outbreak of the latest conflict between the state of Israel and the Palestinians living in both Gaza and the West Bank, there has been growing outrage in the West due to the blatant war crimes being committed by Israeli forces. As I detailed in my video last week – titled Zionist Hypocrisy Exposed – Western governments have not only been wilfully ignoring these war crimes, but they have in fact pledged their support to Israel and even offered to give the Zionist state generous handouts in order to ensure that the Israeli Defence Force remains well armed and can continue its reign of terror.

Due to this ongoing outrage and the growing number of blatant human rights abuses being committed by the IDF, protests have been growing all over the Western world. Here in the UK, these protests have brought London to a standstill two weekends in a row, with the numbers attending pro-Palestinian demonstrations only growing. What's more, protests against the Conservative government have broken out in a number of other large cities up and down the UK and show no signs of waning.

This has not been to the liking of the vast majority of the mainstream media – especially the so-called Conservative press. One newspaper in particular – the Daily Mail – has been desperately publishing article after article calling for the police and the state to clamp down on these protestors in order stifle their freedom of expression and take away their democratic rights.

Sadly, the Daily Mail comments section has been filled with overwhelming praise for the idea of a massive clamp down on the rights of pro-Palestinian demonstrators – with numerous comments calling for the protests themselves to be subject to a blanket ban and some going as far as to suggest that individual protestors should be arrested and charged. This is not good, and I will explain why.

This is a text book example of how the media and the state work together in order to pass new legislation that will fundamentally affect EVERYONE, not just the people it was brought in to supposedly deal with. And let's get right to the point; the only people this new legislation will end up serving is the Zionists.

And that's a very important point, not least because fundamentally, it is in fact the Zionists themselves and their actions that have brought about the conditions that have resulted in these widespread demonstrations.

You see, Zionists and their friends in the media have repeatedly and very vocally insisted that Western nations should open their borders and let in millions of people from the Middle East. At the same time, the very same Zionists have also lobbied for constant Western involvement and meddling in the Middle East, leading to a number of wars and military interventions that have led to millions of people in the region being displaced. All of these conflicts have only really benefited one nation – Israel, yet all have been funded by the Western taxpayer and many have been fought by young white men who have been effectively reduced to nothing more than pawns in the Zionists' game.

The constant upheavals created by these wars in the Middle East have led to a huge movement of people from the region, most of whom have headed to the West. The result of which is plain to see: this migration of people has radically altered the demographics of numerous Western nations. As a result, many European nations now have sizeable Muslims populations because of the Zionist desire for both open borders and endless conflict in the Middle East.

Yet now we see the same Zionists and their media puppets crying over the fact that hundreds of thousands of people in the West are protesting against the state of Israel and are flying Palestinian flags. The hyperbole over this issue is astounding, with some likening these protests to a second 'holocaust'. And the use of such language is no accident - it is not merely a slip of the tongue made during a heated moment, it is in fact a deliberate attempt to prevent debate and silence critics of the state of Israel.

At this point, some may think that these protests might be a wake-up call to Zionists, as clearly Zionist policies are creating an environment in the West that is becoming ever more hostile to both Zionists themselves and their objectives. Logically, one may believe that such protests may lead to Zionists calling for an end to mass immigration or even campaigning for the widespread deportation of those who came here from the Middle East. But that is not going to happen. What's more, the Zionists are definitely NOT going to stop using the West to wage wars on their behalf.

Instead, the Zionists' solution to this 'problem' – a problem that is completely of their own making – is to use the media to whip a frenzy and call upon the government to clamp down on freedom of speech and freedom of association. And that's what we are seeing here: Zionists and their puppets in the media are beginning to call for draconian new laws in order to clamp down on pro-Palestinian protests.

And sadly, this is what many of the die hard conservative Daily Mail readers are already clamouring for. However, there is one catch – and it's a pretty big one. If the Conservative government does indeed pass a new law in order to crack down on these protests, that law will not be highly specific, and it will not just target one group of people. Oh no, that law will be open ended, vague and highly flexible – in order to allow said law to be interpreted in a number of different ways so that it can also be used against White people who dare to campaign against mass immigration and anti-White polices.

And this is nothing new - this is a plan that we have seen play out time and again.

The media whip up a frenzy, the public call for immediate change and the Government then comply – by eagerly passing legislation that takes away the rights of everyone. This is how the public end up being conned into cheering on the government, as that government takes away their democratic rights and freedoms.

But how is the Daily Mail doing this? Well, in the most disingenuous way of course! The Daily Mail is stoking outrage by showing picture after picture of people of foreign descent massing on the streets of British cities with foreign flags in their hands. The natural gut reaction of the average Daily Mail reader is one of revulsion. Not necessarily because they hate the pro-Palestinian cause or the Palestinian people, but because they are on the whole patriotic White folk that oppose mass immigration. In short: the Daily Mail reader opposes the sight of foreign people waving foreign flags on British soil, because the average Daily Mail reader is opposed to the demographic changes that are taking place in Britain and they rightfully fear that one day they will be reduced to a minority and end up seeing their culture and way of life replaced.

But there's the deception. The Daily Mail aren't opposed to these demographic changes, the Daily Mail welcomes mass immigration, the Daily Mail supports the current Conservative government -which has the worst record on migration in British history - and the Daily Mail also vehemently opposes groups and individuals that campaign against immigration and demographic change, regularly smearing genuine nationalist figureheads and parties.

The Daily Mail is cynically playing on the racially charged feelings that are stirred up in their readership by these pictures of foreign folk waving foreign flags, and they are doing so in order to get their readership on board with the campaign for new laws. The irony being, that if such laws do come into force, they will inevitably be used to prevent any organised push-back against the very thing that Daily Mail readers really want to stop – which if of course mass immigration.

This is a classic case of how Zionists create a problem, then end up benefiting from that problem. Zionists and their friends in the media have no intention what-so-ever of unpicking this mess. In fact, leading pro-refugee charities, which just happen to be run by Jews, are already proposing that in the wake of the current conflict, Britain should take even MORE refugees from Palestine and the Middle East.

In fact, the Zionist desire to flood the West with migrants has not been diminished one bit. Instead, these Zionists have seen an opening which may well allow the politicians in their back pockets to pass legislation that will prevent anyone campaigning against any Zionist interest – be that the state of Israel itself, future declarations of war in the Middle East or mass immigration into the West.

As such, nationalists in the UK must be careful what they wish for. Don't fall into the trap of calling for new laws that will be used in the future to take away the rights of the indigenous people of these islands.

The right to protest and the right to take to the streets in order to collectively voice our opinions is of paramount importance and should be something that we never campaign against. Those cheering on the passing of draconian new legislation may well smile in the short term as the British police are granted powers to break up pro-Palestinian demonstrations, but the smiles will soon be replaced by anger and tears when those same police officers use those same powers to ban and break up protests against mass immigration and its effects.

Our job in this current climate is to call out Zionist hypocrisy where ever we can. As such, we should oppose any calls for draconian new laws and continue to spread the truth about what is really occurring – both in the Middle East and here at home.

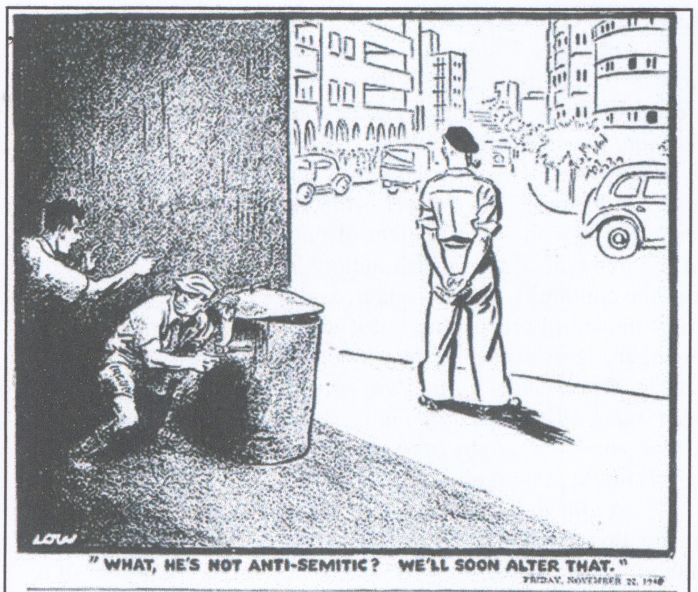
* * * * *



Those Britons who mistakenly support 'brave little Israel' are never going to learn from the MSM the truth about events in Palestine prior to the Zionist theft of the land in 1948 using the scrap of paper called The Balfour Declaration (1917) and merciless Zionist terrorism against the native Palestinians and British troops and police stationed there to keep the peace. The above cartoon by LOW of an off duty British soldier in Palestine about to be shot in the back by zionist gangsters is dated Nov. 22. Year unclear, pre-1949, and probably from the London Evening Standard. (Also see page 3).

ANGER IS OUR SWORD

By A. K. Chesterton

Last week, when writing of the death of Roy Campbell*, I quoted his lines:

> so horneted with strident wings > to his own trumpet peal and drum
> the toreadoring sylph will come, > and anger is the sword he brings.

I added: "It is good to remember that anger is indeed a sword - and sharp." One remark which has reached me was made by a friend of a Candour subscriber who declared: " There is nothing constructive about anger. Anger is a sterile thing." If I may say so (and even if I may not!) that criticism is nonsense.

What emotion becomes a man when he hears of a widow cheated out of her life's savings by a crook, or of the torture of a child, or of any other foul deed? Pained surprise? If it were not for anger, and for the fear of anger, the crooks and the torturers and the betrayers would meet with no opposition: theirs would be the earth and everything that's in it. Thanks to public complacency and a false sense of self-interest that is very nearly the position that the world has reached.

Anger becomes a sterile thing only when a person confronting evil rages but refrains from joining as best he may in the battle for the right. Anger is then self-consuming and can be destructive of the human personality. Very often, of course, we are all indignant about matters which we are powerless to mend: such indignation is futile and we should not cosset it. But where there is a collective evil to be fought it is sheer cowardice or at best culpable indolence to say: "This is something too big for me. I can do nothing about it." To be made angry by wickedness but to refuse to take such remedial action as may be possible is surely to desert the cause of man.

CONTINUOUS BETRAYAL

"Ah, yes," some of our critics may reply, "but you Candour people are angry all the time." Readers, indeed, sometimes remonstrate with me along these lines. They say, in effect: "Constant anger is debilitating: it precludes all possibility of remedial action. Why do you not mix your censure with at least occasional praise?" My answer is that the task of keeping under constant review the management of public affairs convinces us that the betrayal of the British nations is continuous, so that to break the continuity of one's anger, as it were, would not only be a most unnatural proceeding but it would make the sincerity of that anger highly suspect. One cannot say: "As I was very angry over the Government's handling of the Suez business, and as anger is a debilitating thing. I have decided not to be angry over the Government's release of the murderous Makarios!" Genuine anger is not kept on tap!

As for the suggestion that praise should be mixed with censure, that to my mind would be no less synthetic and insincere a method of setting to work. One does not say to the master of a ship rapidly heading for disaster: "Captain, you have fine, sensitive fingers. Your touch on the wheel is masterly. You are doubtless an admirable husband and an excellent father, to say nothing of being a fine figure of a man. But, prithee good sir, would it not be wise, if you will forgive my drawing attention to the matter, some time at your convenience to glance ahead to see where you are going?" What one does say, at the top of one's voice, is: "Look out, you bloody fool, you're steering for the rocks!" If Candour's tone is similarly brusque and peremptory, the reason is that our national plight is not a political abstraction but as real and vivid to us as a shipwreck.

DECLINE NOT INEVITABLE

I have previously described the look of sadness that comes into the eyes of a friend of mine - a man who has spent the best years of his life overseas in devoted service to his country - whenever we discuss the body blows which are shattering the British Empire. His eyes speak of the humiliation of the present contrasted with the grandeur of the past. And then, at the first opportunity, as though he cannot bear to think about it, he gently leads the conversation to the day's cricket at Lords. He has become resigned to the twilight and is ready for the dark.

The sadness of this man - a retired General - would be my sadness, and the sadness of the friends who stand with me, if we thought of the process as a regrettable but unavoidable decline and fall ordained by Nature. Sadness would then be the only appropriate - indeed, the only possible - emotion. But we know with absolute certainty that the British Empire is not dying of old age. We know that its death was long ago decreed by alien and evil power-masters. We know that sentence is being carried out by economic strangulation and the poisoning of the public's mind. We know that the death-dealers have the active, even enthusiastic, collaboration of national leaders who lack the will or the desire to battle against the might of international finance, and who are delighted to occupy the high-sounding offices which are the reward of their subservience. This knowledge turns what would have been our despair into rebellion. It fashions what would have been our sadness into a sword - the sword of anger.

NO MORE THAN A WEAPON

Armed with the sword of anger we advance into battle determined to retrieve our national and Imperial fortune or be laid low in the attempt. But while anger is our weapon, it is no more than our weapon. It is not the stuff of our spirits. Our spirits are gay with the gaiety of men and women who elect not to be cattle passively awaiting the slaughterman, but warriors infused with a warrior's purpose and invested with a warrior's dignity.

Polite circumlocutions are no part of a warrior's equipment. The soldier's tongue is rough.

The above article by AK first appeared in Candour in May 1957. John Tyndall reprinted it in Spearhead No. 175 May 1983. Here it is again and still timely. I very recently took delivery of some 20 boxes of back issues of Candour, Spearhead, Nationalism Today, etc, so have some sorting to do which brings me on to:

*Roy Campbell. I will try and find the issue of Candour from the week before this article was published to establish what AK's connection with him was. From the internet I see that Mr.Campbell was a contemporary of AK's. Also born in South Africa but two years later, a poet, he went from being a member of the Bloomsbury group of snobbish degenerates to becoming a Catholic and supporting Franco and the Nationalists during the Spanish Civil War. This led to him being labelled a fascist by influential left-wing literati damaging his reputation as a poet to this day. He became friendly with C.S. Lewis and J.R.R. Tolkein (a Candour subscriber for 20 years until his death).

The British State's Casual Treason

By Stephen Smith

Cyril Osborne and Early Resistance to 1950s Immigration

"You are suffering from the unrestricted imports of cheaper goods. You are suffering also from the unrestricted immigration of the people who make these goods. The evils of immigration have increased during recent years. And behind those people who have already reached these shores, remember there are millions of the same kind who, under easily conceivable circumstances, might follow in their track, and might invade this country in a way and to an extent of which few people have at any present any conception. The same causes that brought 10,000 and 20,000, and tens of thousands, may bring hundreds of thousands, or even millions. If that would be an evil, surely, he is a statesman who would deal with it in the beginning. When it began, we were told it was so small that it would not matter to us. Now it has been growing with great rapidity, it has already affected a whole district, it is spreading into other parts of the country... Will you take it in time, or will you wait, hoping for something to turn up which will preserve you from what all see to be the natural consequences of such an invasion?"....

-Speech in East London by Joseph Chamberlain M.P. ('Radical Joe')
The Times* 16th December 1904

Most British people could easily assume that Commonwealth immigration started in 1968. The year, of course, of Enoch Powell's famous 'Rivers of Blood' speech. However, Nationalist Britons had opposed immigration a decade earlier. A.K. Chesterton's League of Empire Loyalists, Oswald Mosley's Union Movement, individuals such as Colin Jordan, John Tyndall, John Bean, and assorted Nationalist groups, all were continually active in the late 1950s.

However, most of the general public, as just mentioned, still consider Enoch Powell to be the first public figure to raise the importance of this fundamental issue. He wasn't. That honour goes to Sir Cyril Osborne M.P. who brought this matter to public attention as early as 1952! (And again in 1955 with serious attempts at legislation).

The serious matter of Commonwealth Immigration did not transpire in 1968. It was immediately noticed in 1948! The year Empire Windrush docked at Tilbury, the year of the Labour Government's British Nationality Act that gave nominal citizenship to hundreds of millions of colonial subjects.

Ironically, bearing in mind the future behaviour of the Labour Party, regarding Race & Immigration, it was inner-city Labour M.P.s who initially raised the alarm, concerning Commonwealth Immigration. Unfortunately, at this time, only a minority of the political class noted the future dangers. For a period of ten, twelve years (up to the Commonwealth Immigration Act 1962). The majority of Westminster M.P.s, Civil Service, media, considered immigration a secondary matter, that might need looking at. At some point. No reason to discuss it now. Not important.

Sir Cyril Osborne

Sir Cyril Osborne (19 June 1898 - 31 August 1969) was a Justice of the Peace for Leicestershire and a British Conservative politician who served as member of Parliament (MP) for the Louth constituency in Lincolnshire from 1945 to his death.

He was an early member of the Monday Club.

Well, it was vitally important to White Working-Class Britons especially in inner-city areas. Incidentally, the same Britons, who in the previous decade were fighting, dying, and surviving the very recent Second World War. Demobbed soldiers and shattered, fatigued civilians now had to contend with unrequested immigrants competing for jobs, houses, and other national resources. Also, by 1954 a Home Office report noted a growing crime problem associated with immigration.

Attlee's Government 1945-51

"The coloured races were men and brothers with the people of this country with every right to citizenship".

-James Chuter-Ede, Labour Home Secretary 1945-51
Speaking to the House of Commons

Prime Minister Clement Attlee's Labour government passed the 1948 British Nationality Act. In theory this gave citizenship to over 500 million people around the world. To be fair to politicians of the time they did not expect the influx that become a flood that would radically change the nature of British society. Liberals and conservatives, for varying reasons, wanted to keep the Commonwealth together. May have seemed a nice gesture. No one expected the arrival of the passenger liner, Empire Windrush containing nearly 500 West Indian immigrants, enticed to Britain by false claims of instant prosperity.

In some quarters a need for temporary workers was discussed. Though why Great Britain, a supremely innovative nation, needed large numbers of unskilled/semi-skilled workers was not mentioned. Even a temporary labour shortage should never have resulted in mass immigration. Stranger still when one considers that significant numbers of Britons were being lured to White Commonwealth countries, Australia being a favourite. The British state made no attempt to retain them here with better pay and conditions but was quite happy to swap them for the coloured citizens of the former British Empire.

Britain's economy would have prospered better by concentrating on labour saving devices and other aspects of technology vital for British industry rather than importing unskilled immigrants plus all the social problems attached to immigration. As regards the canard that 'lazy' Britons turned down jobs in transport and the NHS, has this ever been proved? Similar lie was parroted during the 'New Labour' years of mass immigration in the millions.

Shortly after Empire Windrush docked at Tilbury port, Essex in the summer of 1948, no fewer than 11 Labour M.P.s wrote to the Prime Minister, their words: "An influx of coloured people domiciled here is likely to impair the harmony, strength and cohesion of public life".

(The arrival of the Empire Windrush has a slight mystery to it. Neither the government nor the Civil Service or big business requested the Jamaican workers. Odd. A subject worth investigating further. They could not be rejected, repatriated because they were after all .... British subjects.)

As the numbers were tiny, few people in politics or in British society generally took much notice or raised serious objections. Besides, all manner of races and nationalities had stayed and passed through Britain during World War Two.

There was a strange anomaly regarding immigration legislation relating to Britain and her commonwealth/colonies. Anyone from the other countries could enter Britain with no obstruction. Yet, the policy didn't apply in reverse. Someone from Britain, wishing to enter countries from Aden to Zanzibar, had to go through different procedures to gain entry. A nationally minded government should have rectified this strange arrangement, but the conservatives were desperate to cling onto empire and liberals were horrified at causing offence. Neither group wanted to 'upset' the Commonwealth!

Apart from Labour M.P.s in urban, White Working-Class constituencies the Attlee Labour government had little interest in immigration control. The Labour M.P.s from the inner cities merely voiced their concerns about immigration but it was under the second premiership of Winston Churchill ( his 'Indian Summer' premiership) that one M.P. wanted firm legislation to completely halt immigration!

Early Concerns and Rising Number

"It would be better to stop the influx now to forestall future difficulties".

-Mr. J. Keith, Welfare Officer, Colonial Office, 1952

One of the last things Labour did in office (before losing the 1951 General Election) was to conclude a trade agreement in sugar with Cuba. They should have purchased it from Jamaica, which was after all still part of our fading empire. The following year, 1952, the United States congress passed the McCarran-Walter Act which effectively curtailed Jamaican immigration to the United States. Combined with the loss of trade in sugar exported to Britain, the U.S Act meant an increase in Jamaican unemployment. Logically, Jamaicans who would have gone to work in nearby America, inevitably ended up in Britain under the 1948 British Nationality Act. Thus began the large-scale movement of Jamaicans towards Britain.

In 1952 the potential problems of immigration seemed trivial, not particularly of great public interest and besides as already noted the Second World war saw all manner of different races and cultures pass through Britain. They'll probably go home when their work is finished! Britain's political 'elite' decided not to limit Commonwealth immigration. For some, those who still savoured British Imperialism there was the desire to keep together what remained of the Empire/Commonwealth/Colonies. For those of a liberal mind this was mankind coming together as one. A quick look at statistics for Commonwealth immigration will explain this relaxed attitude but also indicate what actually happened over the next decade: 1953 – 3,000, 1954 – 11,000, 1955*- 42,650, 1960 – 57,000, 1961 – 136,400, 1962 (first six months) - 95,000. These figures would include immigration not just from Jamaica/West Indies but also West Africa and the Indian sub-continent.

Examining the figures for 1953 the issue does seem trivial, however the 1955* figure (the last year of Churchill's Premiership) shows, crucially, the take off point, the point leading to what we now call mass immigration. Before the 1962 Commonwealth Immigration Act (a muddled ultimately futile attempt to impose some control!) the 18-month period prior to the act becoming law saw a total of 231,400 enter Britain. This influx at the start of the 1960s provided the nucleus for Britain's Commonwealth immigrant population, a population now running into several millions plus.

Birth of a False Notion

"I note what you say, but I think it would be a great mistake to take the emigration of this Jamaican party to the United Kingdom too seriously." 5th July 1948.

Prime Minister Clement Attlee's reply to JD Murray, one of the 11 Labour M.P.s who wrote to him, raising concerns about the arrival of the Empire Windrush at Tilbury Docks in 1948

There was no evidence, in 1948, that Commonwealth immigrants were required/wanted by the British state or organisations or big business. There was no government policy requesting these immigrants to come to Britain. Later on, in the 1950s and beyond the NHS and transport groups were eager to recruit from the West Indies. However, in 1948 there was only the British Nationality Act but no actual policy to deliberately encourage this immigration. Despite the White exodus to the dominions over the next decade, unemployment in Britain was never below 250,000. We had plenty of surplus labour to rebuild our country after World War Two!

If some Britons, bearing in mind the poverty of the 1930s and World War Two, didn't want to perform low paid unskilled labour with long hours/poor conditions then the onus of responsibility was with the state/employers to create better pay and conditions. The 'lazy Briton' is a grotesque myth promoted by liberal multi-racialists and avaricious sections of the commercial world. This myth has been revived in recent times when millions of immigrants were let into Britain starting with the era of 'New Labour' governments. 'Hard working immigrant' is business-speak for quasi-slave. Thus, the Globalists of the West despise the immigrant as well as the native!

We should always remember that Britons through political action, dating back to the end of the 18th century, fought for basic employment rights relating to pay, hours, conditions, and contracts. The Naval Mutinies 1797, Tolpuddle Martyrs, The Chartists, the early Trade Unionists. Political action that often resulted in confrontation with the state, prosecution, or transportation to Australia! Our ancestors battled to enable us to have decent working lives. When either during the Thatcher era or Blair era (both creatures ideologically compatible!) scorn was poured on the British worker (who only wanted a fair deal) the liberal plutocrats of the system showed their utter contempt for the British worker who battled long and hard, over two centuries, for a better life and a decent standard of living.

Getting back to 1948 why should a temporary labour shortage (if there actually was one) result in the ethnic transformation of one's native land? Sometimes at our places of work many of us have had to stretch ourselves when colleagues are sick, holidays, kids off school etc. We work an extra day or do overtime. Sometimes temporary workers are used to help out, but it is rarely suggested that there should be the large-scale importation of permanent workers into an organisation or company. Britain post-WW2 should have invested in labour saving technology rather than opting for the short-term solution of immigration which would have long-term implications.

Amidst all this confusion, muddle and indifference, all that was really required (c.1955) was a simple amendment to the 1948 British Nationality Act ensuring that significant numbers of Commonwealth citizens did not have the absolute right of residence here. This amendment could have been reinforced with stringent measures regarding employment, health and criminal records. These actions would have effectively shut the door on Commonwealth immigration!

Cabinet papers released in 1986 showed that both the Churchill and Eden governments of the 1950s could have easily resolved this crucial issue. Any Nationalist who wants to investigate this subject further should look up reports and features in Hansard the official record of UK Parliamentary debates/reports, The Spectator magazine and that temple of liberalism The Guardian. These three are the best sources for a subject, which even after 70 years, seems covered in a faint mist of obscurity; Hansard 1952 & 1965, Spectator 1955 & 1968, Guardian 1968 are the best years for key articles. One of the Guardian features worth examining is an article where the CBI (Confederation of British Industry) was informing us that. "Immigrants are vital to the economy". Even 55 years ago greedy bosses were looking for cheap labour. The same feature notes that according to official figures the Commonwealth (coloured) population had increased from c.40,000 in 1954 to c.820,000 in 1968. (I avoided quoting or repeating at length everything noted in these publications as it would have made this article too unwieldy.)

The British Establishment then, as now, was a curious eclectic mix of political elements; stagnant conservatives, deracinated liberals, internationalists of all stripes, standard conservatives, and a few good patriots. Of the last category one in particular, stands out during this period and I shall discuss him in the next series of paragraphs.

1955

In January 1955 Sir Cyril Osborne M.P. who, acting solo, had campaigned against immigration since 1952 proposed to introduce a Private Members Bill 'To regulate the admission into the UK of persons not belonging to the British Isles, under the 10-minute rule. The Cabinet decided to abstain advising ministers should do likewise or vote in favour. The Chief Whip told everyone else concerned to avoid voting against. Osborne's bill looked promising. As legislation it would have stopped the influx. However, Osborne never presented his bill. It was stillborn before leaving the political womb. Again, a mystery. It has since been alleged that Sir Cyril was put under extraordinary pressure by various forces including sections of the government itself. Ironically the man at the head of government, who occupied a demi-god like role in British politics, Sir Winston Churchill, would also have been strongly in favour of Osborne's bill. But the liberal members of his government plus similar elements within the higher echelons of the Civil Service may have wished to thwart Osborne's bill. After his death in 1969 Sir Cyril's political papers were destroyed!

A decent man attempting to take action on behalf of his country – alas, seemingly crushed by forces within the system. As Enoch Powell was to find out in 1968, lone wolf parliamentary campaigns are of little use if the bulk of the Establishment is either hostile or indifferent. This inability to deal, once and for all, with immigration in the 1950s proves that Britain possesses a hostile elite with absolute contempt and negligence for ordinary Britons.

The final days of Sir Winston Churchill's (peacetime) government saw a mild attempt to investigate concerns about immigration. A Civil Service committee (surely the ultimate in political inertia) was created with the magnificent title of - "Working Party on the Social & Economic Problems Arising from the Growing Influx of Coloured Workers from Commonwealth Countries". Phew. It operated from December 1952 to January 1954. Its conclusion was that legislation was needed to deal with immigration. Something that could have been worked out in a matter of days. But no legislation was implemented until the 1962 Act, by which time the immigrant population had formed into a nucleus of several hundred thousand.

> "Tradition means giving votes to the most obscure of all classes, our ancestors. It is the democracy of the dead. Tradition refuses to submit to that arrogant oligarchy who merely happen to be walking around".
> G.K. Chesterton

Anthony Eden now led the Conservative Party after Churchill's retirement. Eden fought and won the 1955 General Election and the party returned to power with a majority of 60. Good enough to pass legislation possibly deemed 'controversial.' Unfortunately, Eden and his cabinet had little interest in immigration. It was hardly discussed throughout 1955. The last time it appears as a subject for discussion at cabinet level was in November that year. Tory manifestos for the General elections of 1955 & 1959 considered it an irrelevance. This was a serious failure of statecraft and a gross abnegation of duty towards the British people.

In 1955 the editor of The Spectator magazine was Ian Gilmour, later on in his career a Tory M.P., notably under Margaret Thatcher. Gilmour recorded in his book Inside Right the failure of Fifties British politicians to discuss let alone act on this important issue of immigration: "British politicians of all parties in the Fifties and early Sixties showed themselves to be lamentably short-sighted on these questions... the great immigration took place without the British people feeling they had been consulted, an omission which has produced much natural resentment. ...The failure of politicians of all parties to respond earlier to the fear and discontent that were being expressed in the country did much to diminish public faith in British institutions". The nation's ethnic composition underwent a major change almost overnight with no democratic approval, no serious public debate, nobody asked us.

1958

In 1958 there were race riots in Notting Hill Gate, West London and in Nottingham, East Midlands. These disturbances were the first signs of open aggressive opposition to post-World War Two coloured immigration. White youths attacked and fought with blacks in the streets for a prolonged period in the late summer of that year. Five nights of violence. Liberal-Left attitudes towards White racial consciousness were apparent even then. Only the Whites were singled out for their violent behaviour. Nine white youths (often described as 'Teddy Boys') were jailed for four years each by Mr. Justice Salmon. Harsh. Even that standard bearer of the liberal-left Fenner Brockway thought the sentences were too heavy and appealed for a reduction in the terms. The aftermath of the Second World War saw a gradual, incremental critique of any attempts by Whites to defend themselves or object to the results of mass immigration.

Two, extremely poor, films that came out at this time – Flame in the Streets and Wind of Change were attempts to demonise proud whites and at the same time promote multi-racialism and integration. This a mere decade and a half after the cessation of hostilities in World War Two. During the 1959 General Election, Sir Oswald Mosley's Union Movement fought the North Kensington seat (which covers Notting Hill) mainly on an anti-immigration ticket. Despite intensive political work by Sir Oswald and his associates, he polled only 2,821 votes (8.2%) and lost his deposit. Offered a chance to vote emphatically against immigration the British people of that area spurned the opportunity. Life was still relatively good for the White Working-Class in late 1950s Britain. Full employment, public housing and material and technological benefits, one could almost forget about the growing dangers of immigration.

A British 'Cato the Elder'

Confusion reigned among the various British political characters of the 1950s. Some (despite party labels) were essentially liberal; Labour's Chuter-Ede, Tories Alan Lennox-Boyd. Some genuinely unsure what to do about Commonwealth Immigration. A tiny few (unfortunately) realised the future magnitude of the problem and what had to be done immediately, such characters were in both two major political parties, but it was certain conservatives who really stood out. Apart from Sir Cyril Osborne it was the 5th Marquess of Salisbury who made strenuous efforts to halt immigration in the mid-1950s. Salisbury's family name, Cecil, went back to Elizabethan and Jacobean times. Thus, he was related to the great Burghley and his son Robert who both served as quasi-Prime minsters under Elizabeth I and James I. This Salisbury was a beacon of genuine patriotism and sanity. He was a Burkean Tory. Unconcerned with the next election or opinion polls he thought in terms of the unborn generations of Britons. He usually found himself outnumbered in the cabinet when his demands regarding immigration were either ignored or sidelined. This was especially the case when he served in the Eden government of 1955-57. Salisbury was at various times; Colonial Secretary, Dominion's Secretary and Commonwealth Relations Secretary. An imperialist who supported the regimes of Rhodesia and South Africa. He tried at various times to introduce measures to end immigration and his patrician brilliance can be summed up in these comments from 1955: "it is not for me merely a question of whether criminal negroes should be allowed in or not... it is a question whether great quantities of negroes, criminal or not, should be allowed to come". And he continued; "we should recognise that this coloured problem is potentially of a fundamental nature for the future of our country".

If only...?

Imagine if Osborne's individual bill had gone though in 1955 or Salisbury's demands in cabinet had been agreed to. It begs a question; would Britain had still remained as a mono-racial society? With the benefit of hindsight probably not! Although mass immigration/multi-culturalism would have been delayed till the 1970s or thereabouts. Sir Cyril Osborne's brave attempt to protect the ethno-cultural homogeneity of Britain, valiant and honourable though it was, would have still see Britain's transformation into a cosmopolitan society. The key was probably the political and psychological impact of the aftermath of World War Two. The popular, omnipresent images of World War Two regarding civilian suffering, whether subject to revisionism or not, seriously affected the minds of European men and women. Thus, was created a creature that still torments us today; The monster of 'antiracism'. Post-World War Two Britain started to become gradually shrouded in a general feeling of cosmopolitanism. A feeling especially strong among the political class and sections of the media. Though, as events proved, such a creed would be (is) stoutly resisted by the embattled White Working Class. Neither can this be put down to colonialism. Austria, Ireland and Sweden never had non-European empires, yet they are now multi-cultural!

"The difficulty was the minute we said we've got to keep these black chaps out, the whole Commonwealth lark would have blown up... it would have meant a fundamental change in the nature of the Queen's Dominions and relations between Commonwealth countries".

Churchill's Private Secretary 1952

In 1918, in Post-World War One Britain, things were very different. Race riots in London, Liverpool and Cardiff, often instigated by recently demobilised soldiers, provided firm examples that the majority of Britons had minimal desire for multi-racialism. The British people, just after World War One would have been imbued with an increased sense of Nationalism and a belligerent temperament after four years of blood and slaughter. Also, White Working-Class districts before redevelopment and the hypnosis of television appeared, possessed an integrated, communal nature. Natural patriotic communities, who had experienced the horror of war on the Western Front and would have had zero tolerance for the cosmopolitan fancies of death wish liberals!

Change, however, seemed to occur in the inter-war years, in the 1920s. The music and fashion of the jazz age. Cultural faeces eventually culminating in the Boogie-Woogie music of the World War Two era. Thus, the British (and other western peoples) were being softened up for the multi-racialism they would fully experience post-1945. The two global conflicts had taken a lot out of the British people. Aside of financial/material loss the genetic loss was the worst damage of all! Over a million dead Britons in the two conflicts. Think of the young, childless middle-class officers who perished in World War One. The young, childless working-class lad on the beaches of Normandy in 1944. Many of these warriors left no issue behind. Such people would have been instinctively Racial-Nationalist. They would have objected to the beginnings of mass immigration in 1948!

Arguments rage back and forth about Winston Churchill, but if the records of the time are accurate, there was no doubt, during his second premiership, he wanted to completely stop-

Commonwealth immigration. Just before he retired Churchill had a conversation with Ian Gilmour, noted earlier in this article, then Editor of The Spectator magazine, later a Tory M.P. The subject of immigration came up during their discussion – and Churchill commented "I think it is the most important subject facing the country, but I cannot get any of my ministers to take notice".

Unfortunately (for us) Churchill's successor was the neurotic and slightly unstable Anthony Eden. During Eden's brief premiership, before the disaster of Suez in 1956, the crucial subject of Commonwealth immigration had minimal interest for Eden's cabinet, which was heavily populated with liberal conservatives. Eden won the General election in May 1955, but immigration ceased to be a topic for the cabinet after November 1955. Eden's collection of cabinet liberals had barely concealed contempt for the mass of ordinary Britons. Only Salisbury, a real patriot, wanted to completely halt immigration.

As mentioned earlier the psyche of many British and European minds had been altered – certainly amongst the British political elite. Thus, was created a feeling of unease with the concepts of Nationalism, Racialism and the raw forces of nature. Therefore, the very idea of stopping immigration and advocating repatriation would have been anathema to many British politicians, Civil Servants and media people.

A mixture of post-war exhaustion, apathy and increasing decadence of liberalism meant that opposition to mass immigration only started in the late-1950s and really become a serious item with Powell's speech of 1968. Opposition to immigration continued with the National front in the 1970s, and later the BNP. Time worked against us as a de facto multi-racial Britain had established itself in the early 1960s. This in parts may seem a depressing article, the lost opportunities to maintain Britain as a mono-racial society. Especially bearing in mind the courageous and tragic efforts of the NF and the BNP.

And yet.....within this ancient nation are still millions of Whites who, overtly or covertly, despise the society that's been imposed upon them. In particular the displaced White Working-Class from the inner cities who have had to swallow the bitter, unrequested pill of state enforced multi-culturalism. Slowly, almost imperceptibly, we, the Britons are rising again. The system has neither restraint nor subtlety. The state seems eager for our disappearance from world history but through journals such as Candour and the solid, rooted intelligent British Democrats our people still have the chance for survival and national resurgence.

CANDOUR = TRUTH

Is there a Mystery About the HMT Empire Windrush?

Further to Mr. Smith's comments near the top of column one page eight of his article.

Having done some research using the National Archives, nationalarchives.gov.uk, I will begin with a brief background of the history of the ship that would become His Majesty's Troopship (HMT) Empire Windrush.

She began life being built in a Jewish owned shipyard, Blohm & Voss, in pre-National Socialist Germany and was launched as the Monte Rosa in December 1930. One of five passenger ships of the class built between 1924 and 1930 and operated by the Hamburg Sud Shipping Company they were all named after mountains in Germany and South America.

She survived WWII having been used as a troop ship for the invasion of Norway in 1940. In 1944 she was hit by at least one torpedo courtesy of the RAF then made safe harbour in Denmark. Only three months later she sustained more damage by a mine explosion, damaging her hull, and then another mine in the Baltic damaged her again in February 1945.

At the end of the war, she was seized as a prize of war by the British, and, in February 1947, she was reassigned as a British troopship, registered in the Port of London, under the new name HMT Empire Windrush, with the official number 18156.

The following guff actually appears in the National Archives report published Thursday 15 December 2022, written by a Mr. Roger Kershaw, and I quote word for word:

"Next June will mark the 75th anniversary of the arrival of HMT Empire Windrush at Tilbury Harbour (sic), carrying on board some 800 passengers who gave their last country of residence as somewhere in the West Indies, and many of whom would migrate as workers and would settle in Britain and help steer its economic recovery after the Second World War."

This nonsense is very ably and clearly refuted by Stephen Smith in his article!

This is followed later by:

"On its arrival at Tilbury on June 22 (1948) all 1,027 passengers (presumably including some British troops? Ed.) were met with a media frenzy heralding the beginning of the British multiracial society."

(My underlining and is that true either? Ed.)

Not exactly impartial history and yet that is the version laid down in the vaults and online for future generations. It certainly deserves much more investigation in the actual National Archives at Kew, London. Some of our retired readers should take this up.

There are questions to which I have not found answers yet. The Empire Windrush was a troopship owned by the Crown and run by the War Office (it only became the Ministry of Defence in 1964. An Orwellian change.) HMT's moved all around the British Empire moving troops and collected fares from civilians to fill empty cabins . Standard practice.

However, there may be more to the Windrush story than meets the eye. Someone organised the 800 or so negroes and the "media frenzy" awaiting them. This was no coincidence or 'accident. Were their fares paid for or subsidized? By whom?

As Stephen also points out at the same time the Government of Australia was encouraging White Britons to head from these shores to Australia as what were nicknamed "£10.00 Poms" subsidised as part of their "White Australia" policy.

Heritage & Destiny Meeting:
Preston, England, 9th September 2023

The following report of this very successful Lancashire meeting is taken from a combination of sources combined with my own comments.
Before you read on I will above all single out Mark Cotterill, meeting organiser and H&D Editor, for what was a superlative effort of organisation and forebearance under great pressure.
Colin Todd.

Above: A view of the stage and some of the audience. There was a balcony to the left where people could also listen and cool down and to the right of this view another room where the stalls were including Candour's.

The Heritage and Destiny meeting in Preston on September 9th was blessed with lovely weather.

Ably chaired by veteran of the National Front and British National Party Keith Axon the meeting began with a full minutes silence for the racial nationalists who had died since 2022.

After his opening remarks Mr. Axon introduced the first speaker of the day of which there would be nine. Including for the first time two women. (It was encouraging to see that 20% of those in attendance were female.)

First on was Benny Bullman. British Movement activist and the lead singer of the White Power band Whitelaw. Benny paid tribute to our fallen comrade Ian Stuart. Ian was the founder of Blood and Honour. So hard to believe that it is thirty years since he died. Benny emphasised that Ian made an impact that is still being felt and he lives every time his recordings and lyrics are heard.

The second speaker was Professor John Kersey, educationalist and musician who was followed by Laura Towler, deputy leader of Patriotic Alternative.

Before the lunch break Keith Axon and meeting organiser Mark Cotterill auctioned a variety of nationalist items. The auction raised £300.

The lunch was an excellent buffet provided by the BM's Women's Division and gave attendees the chance to call at the various stalls and to renew old comradeships or make new ones. (Your Editor met the former Leeds NF organiser Glenn who I had not had any contact with for some 35 years. I also met some Candour subscribers for the first time. Always good to put faces to names).

The second part of the meeting opened with the fourth speaker of the day Dr. Jim Lewthwaite. An archaeologist and former BNP city councillor Jim is chairman of the British Democrats. He based his speech around Nigel Biggar's new book Colonialism: A Moral Reckoning. Jim talked about the vastly positive side of the British Empire. Including the British role in trying to stop slavery using the might of the Royal Navy.

Fifth speaker of the afternoon was twenty one year old Isabel Peralta (who spoke in Spanish with an English translation being read by Peter Rushton). Isabel presented her belief that the National Socialist revolution did not end with the fall of Berlin in 1945, and that faith in the true European cause is capable of moving mountains. She spoke of the 300 Spartans who stood fast and fought to the death against the 200,000 strong Persian army at the battle of Thermopylae in 480 BC and who showed the true spirit of Europe that we need now.

Stephen Frost was the next speaker. National Secretary of the British Movement, long-standing friend of Colin Jordan and author of the Jordan biography TWAS A GOOD FIGHT!

Stephen spoke about our movement of resistance to multicultural decay being a"broad church" of patriots not all of whom, by any means, are National Socialists. He emphasised that BM has always been prepared to lend its support to sincere comrades from other groups and parties - at demonstrations, election campaigns and at meetings such as this one.

Before the second break of the afternoon there was the raffle hosted by Mark Cotterill and one of the young ladies who was manning the H&D merchandise stall (on behalf of Candour and subscribers I donated a hardback copy of The History of Candour and the League of Empire Loyalists to be raffled).

After the break Keith Axon opened the third and final part of the meeting and introduced the seventh speaker Ken Schmidt. Ken has been an activist and writer on the American nationalist scene since the 1980s. He writes a regular column for H&D "From the other side of the Pond". He spoke about how the USA is breaking up due to multi-racialism/culturalism and how secessionism may be the only long-term solution if White People are to have any future in North America.

Penultimate speaker was Mark Collett leader of Patriotic Alternative which he formed in 2019. (See pages 4-5 of this issue for a separate article by Mark). Mark spoke about his ten years in the BNP and his once close relationship with Nick Gri££in. About what the BNP did right and how it went so very wrong. Will a younger generation of nationalist activists learn from the lessons of the past? Who to trust?

The final speaker after what had been a long, very interesting and it must be mentioned rather hot day was Peter Rushton. H&D's Assistant Editor and webmaster.

In a stirring speech he mocked those who had attempted and failed to stop the meeting. We all carry on regardless with the task at hand.

We should be in no doubt, Peter concluded, that reactionary so-called Conservative capitalists are a much worse enemy than the so-called 'Left'. Soon after the arrival of HMT Empire Windrush in the late 1940's (See this issues main article by Stephen Smith The British State's Casual Treason pages 7-11) it was Labour MP's who first warned of the consequences of mass non-White immigration.

To conclude H&D editor Mark Cotterill thanked the audience for making the effort to attend. Some having travelled great distances including two each from the USA, Germany and Spain.

The Friday evening before the meeting there was an enjoyable social in a local pub. The Saturday evening after the meeting many met again in the same pub but a couple of us did take a break and walk around the centre of Preston on a balmy night. It would have been an interesting change if more had done the same, taking advantage of the weather, and having the local sights explained to us. A friendly historic town. It is places like Preston where the English heart still beats among our cocky and now increasingly over confident visitors to the British Isles.

Perhaps next time. ..

Derek Beackon 30th AnniversaryVictory Dinner

ON Saturday 16th September 2023 thirty Patriots from a cross-section of the British Nationalist movement, gathered together in a restaurant in south Essex to celebrate the 30th anniversary of the British National Party's incredible council election victory in Millwall Ward, Isle of Dogs, East London in 1993. Our triumphant candidate was Derek Beackon, popular local East London activist, a brave and sincere man.

If one peruses the Candour 'Rights for Whites' series, one can see the tremendous impact this event had on British politics and moreover it proved that WE could win seats!

Nationalists from the British Democrats, Patriotic Alternative and assorted individual patriots from various backgrounds heard speeches from; Chris Roberts former London BNP organiser, former Tower Hamlets Branch Organiser Stephen Smith, ex-BNP Campaign Director Eddy Butler and a fine, inspired speech from Laura Towler of Patriotic Alternative. Smith and Butler, architects of the Tower Hamlets branch responsible for this political breakthrough both mentioned that the success of the Millwall election victory was created by the four years of dedicated, intelligent hard work of the 'Rights for Whites' campaign. The great man Derek Beackon was in attendance and was warmly applauded.

This piece of history from 16th September 1993 established the credo of Nationalist Community-based politics and signposted the way to the BNP election victories of 2002-2009.

Interested patriots can read about this era in back issues of Candour No's 877-880 inclusive.

The Talking Pictures TV Phenomenon

A small ray of sunshine folks. A British TV Channel run from a garden shed has become a must watch for those who can find few viewable, entertaining or wholesome shows for people like 'us', on any of the hundreds of MSM (Main Stream Media) TV channels out there. Founded in 2015 there is nothing ostentatious or big-budget about Talking Pictures. It is run by a family in an ordinary road in a village near Watford. Their headquarters is an extension in the garden, full of film canisters, DVDs and strings of thank you cards from fans. The team comprises Sarah Cronin-Stanley, a vintage TV and film fan and former actress; her husband Neill, who produces the weekly newsletter and Sarah's dad Noel Cronin, a film distributor who began his career six decades ago in the Rank Organisation post-room.

The channel really took off, largely by word of mouth and through social media, when the Covid 'plandemic' arrived. It made for great lock down entertainment and viewing numbers boomed to more than 3.5 million a week. It is certainly many more now as viewers have stayed with the channel and never returned to the fading and failing, BBC, ITV, Netflix, Sky, or the rest of the wall to wall dross.

The TV shows and films presented on Talking Pictures are almost completely pre-1990 when the Great Replacement push really began to be obvious on the TV networks both in progamming and perhaps even more so in the future scenario advertisements where every family now is somehow mixed-race. Miscegenation is apparently rampant in TV advertising world but probably not so much with its largely Jewish originators, or hopefully, most of their diminishing number of viewers.

That is a role increasingly taken on by the programmed shows themselves between the multi-cult advertisements.

A particularly obvious and pitiful example is Vera, a detective show seemingly set in rural Northumberland but who knew that there were so many non-whites now there especially doing all the brainy jobs we silly Britons are incapable of in places that are in fact still massively white. This has been so obvious that pressure valve stooges such as Littlejohn have written about it in The Daily Mail. Doctors. Forensic scientists. Ethnic police people showing the white cops how racist/anti-homosexual or just generally stupid they are.

The enemy assault on our senses via the small screen (or not so small these days with wall sized screens straight from Ray Bradbury's prophetic novel Fahrenheit 451 in many living rooms) is relentless and way past parody. The inappropriate misplacement of non-white actors in historical dramas from Shakespeare to Dickens. Non-white historians and archeologists at anglo-saxon digs in the English countryside pontificating about 'our' history. You all know the story.

I refer to Talking Pictures TV as a small ray of sunshine and in a world of media giants it is only that and for as long as it is allowed to continue.

The channel has had problems. In 2018, for example, for broadcasting several programmes or films that included 'racist' language. Ofcom got themselves involved after receiving ONE complaint.

The channel now has those grating 'trigger warnings' to protect snowflakes and under 12's from trauma.

Sarah Cronin-Stanley explained

"We absolutely were not endorsing that language, in the same way that we don't endorse the attitudes to women and other groups [that] were very different back then. But I also think it's important that we don't rewrite those films. It's important to learn from the mistakes of the past."

To conclude:

It is what it is. Not everything made decades ago is still worth watching. Some of it can be very disappointing. How the memory plays tricks!

Standouts, for myself at least, are the very popular hour long Footage Detectives presented weekly by the affable pairing of former DJ Mike Read and TPTV founder Noel Cronin. Also the excellent Maigret's TPTV have been showing. Reruns of both the 1960's b/w British hour long TV series starring Rupert Davies and the longer French TV version from the 1990's starring Bruno Cremer.

Enjoy it while you can and marvel at how we managed with so little traffic and zero diversity.

In Their Own Words...

"An independent archive film and television channel

You can watch Talking Pictures TV on Virgin 445, Freesat 306, Freeview or Youview 82 or on the Sky digital satellite platform, channel 328.

Do you remember the thrill and excitement of Saturday Morning Pictures? Where heroes and villains and clowns and crooners, invariably in glorious black & white, would entertain you for hours. Now those glorious days return, and it's not just for Saturday mornings. It's twenty four hours a day. Every day!

So, grab your bag of popcorn and your drink on a stick, take your seat in the one-and-nines, and re-live some of the rarest gems from British film history; plundering the deepest and darkest vaults of Pinewood, Twickenham and Shepperton Studios to present a wide variety of nostalgic treats.

Whether it's westerns or weepies, comedies or creepies, Talking Pictures TV has it all. Relive some of the rarest and greatest gems from film history."

Dear Editor:

Glad all went well at Preston and that Heritage & Destiny overcame such odds in getting everything together.

I have accessed the Heritage & Destiny website account of the gathering and see a splendid photo of you and friends at the most impressive Candour stall - well done. The banners look fantastic!

It was great that the Spanish heroine Isabel Peralta was also there - Spanish Nationalism is one of my areas of interest - and I have just finished re-reading Hugh Thomas' 720 page The Spanish Civil War.

Viva Franco!

May I also recommend the following book -

THE WEAPONIZATION OF LONELINESS: HOW TYRANTS STOKE OUR FEAR OF ISOLATION TO SILENCE, DIVIDE, AND CONQUER
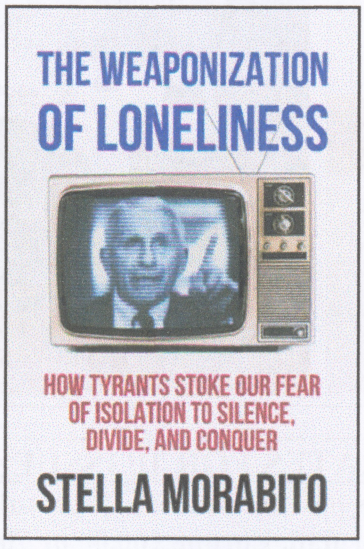
By Stella Morabito
Published by Bombardier 2022
ISBN: 9781 6375 82022

I was prompted to read this after having seen the author interviewed at length on INFOWARS.

Obviously this work was inspired by the advent of the worldwide (Plandemic Covid) lockdowns and the sinister motives that led to this sorry state of affairs.



THE WEAPONIZATION OF LONELINESS
HOW TYRANTS STOKE OUR FEAR OF ISOLATION TO SILENCE, DIVIDE, AND CONQUER
STELLA MORABITO

Although the book is mainly directed at an American audience, it has much to say about "the political uses of loneliness" and "mass alienation through institutional subversion" which should resonate with a British audience.

The moral of this screed is clear - we must all stick together or we are lost.

And the hopeful message it offers is that there are more of us out there than we realize - we just have to go out and find them!

Keep up the good work. Your devoted friends across the pond.

N & E USA

Editor: Thank you both for your continued support. It means a great deal. As you say we can stick together, locally and worldwide, and reach out to others. There are so many who are, or feel, isolated and unheard. Keep in touch with others through Candour.

Dear Editor:

The world 'IS' waking up but we still have to be mindful of who may try and head the cavalry charge.

Long live Candour!

Mallificus Scott

Editor's Reply: Excellent point well made.

British racial nationalism is on the cusp of change. Where there are 'wrong uns' Candour will call them out. Not all 'nationalists' are 'good nationalists'. When we are at a low ebb is the best time to be selective. To reinforce the Cadre and continue to educate and provoke thought and adventure.

He started believing things I knew weren't true. At first I thought it was Alzheimers...
Then I realized he was watching the BBC

Our assault on the Main Stream Media (MSM) must be constant and relentless. Time to CONTINUE turning the tables. NO LET UP! They report FAKE NEWS we report TRUTH!

Our, once proud, local newspapers, may have been reduced to pale shadows of their former selves, and be edited by 12 year olds who do not leave school until they are 24 or so these days, but must be used while they still exist.

They are still read by people who can read and are not glued to their 'smart' phones 24/7. ('Smart' being Newspeak for stupid). They are people who still think and tend to play a part in their local communities. You can practice how to write articles and organise and rehearse your arguments! Hard work is what this comes down to and not leaving it all to others.

Write a letter attacking the BBC licence fee and include the phrase "the BBC was the home of Jimmy Savile for decades" in your letter. Use your imagination and have fun.

The BBC is another crumbling enemy edifice.

They must be made to feel ever more under siege...

Positive News from the Candour Office

A photographic display in our office of the three new Candour banners designed by the grandson of the magnificently attired, Lieut. Colonel J. Creagh Scott, D.S.O., O.B.E., who served both in the Boer War and the Great War. Author of Hidden Government, a founding backer of Candour and member of the League of Empire Loyalists (see banner on left. In the photograph on the cover of his book he is wearing the full dress uniform of an officer of the Argyll and Sutherland Highlanders.)

Front and centre is the portrait of our founder AK Chesterton MC, by Richard Walker (Painted in 1973). It needs TLC. I have yet to have the repairs and reframing costed and organised. It is in safe hands. (The portrait repair fund stands at just £45.00 at present. Thanks to RB £25.00 and NE, USA £20.00). When donating please specify reason, 'Portrait', 'General Funds', etc.

New Candour Cameras

As a result of an appeal I placed in our Blog # 6 in which I asked for £100 towards a camera(s) we received two digital cameras, worth considerably more, and which very much complement each other. The photos below were taken each with the other.

Left: Our pocket Nikon, courtesy of Bill Baillie, which is ideal for quick snaps and on the move.
Right: Our new Kodak, from Yuri Vasil, USA, which arrived with carry case and all sorts of attachments!
Thank you guys!

A Happy & Busy New Year to You All in 2024

I missed any deadlines I had set for myself in the run up to Christmas for Candour so instead let us use this issue and Extra! as a determined, positive and busy start to 2024.

This message is going to be nuts and bolts.

I really hope that you are busy too.

The last few months of 2023 were both active and expensive and over Christmas our usual annual bills arrived at the Candour office All larger than the year before. No surprise there.

Our BM CANDOUR, London, WC1N 3XX, UK mail business address must be paid to cover the next 12 months. £108.00. This address is still very important to us. We refuse to bow to the mighty pressure being put on Candour and the very few other printed racial nationalist journals to stop existing. We want to continue to receive letters and articles from you by post.

Because we stolidly maintain our PRINT presence with your support does not mean that we ignore the internet.

In the week before Christmas we received from out of the blue, (our website provider actually), a bill for £302.40. We should have seen it coming but when you are busy it happens. That has been paid and will cover us for the next three years.

It knocked a dent in our funds and I do not want to just continue to survive but BUILD! From 1945 to now the British racial nationalist movement has managed the amazing feat of not owning one brick! Where did all the legacies go? More importantly, to me, where did all of the irreplaceable book and magazine collections go? Historic correspondence? A tiny percentage has ended up in red run universities in the UK. Most in skips and bins and bonfires. The banners and flags? Same...

You and I will change that through Candour.

No committees or Trusts. Just Colin Todd and a building to start.

First we must refill the Candour War Chest!

Candour refuses to exist purely 'in the ether' that is the internet (our landlady in Preston for the H&D meeting called it "t'internet". Wonderful Lancashire accent) or in/on the toys of today such as Facebook and the rest of the yiddery-pokery box of tricks. Yes, we will continue to extend our use of t'internet, more so this year, with some reorganisation and your super financial assistance, but we will also be increasing our range of new printed publications and historic nationalist literature.

A priority is education. A bore a know but I learn new things everyday and those I meet who think they know everything usually know little and refuse to read, listen or be active.

I said this would be nuts and bolts stuff. We need your support more than ever. Thank you, Colin Todd.

IMPORTANT REPRINT!

SPREAD THE WORD

Recently I met a local printer who was happy to make me some copies of an important and until now much neglected document. (He has made a nice job of it too! More reprints of thought provoking booklets to come.) The 1983 Manifesto of the National Front for the General Election of that year when the NF stood 60 candidates.

In the opinion of some of us this Manifesto needs to, and will, reach a much wider audience again. Obviously it has dated but the core is RADICAL! Something desperately needed in a movement where ideological thought and education basically ended with the worst split of all in 1986.

Perhaps you think that statement is debatable and if so please debate in the pages of Candour.

36 Pages. A5 stiff card cover booklet.

£5.00 in the UK including Postage and Packing.

Take advantage of this special price now and send a fiver cash to BM Candour, London, WC1N 3XX. If using PayPal £7.00. Overseas please contact me, Colin, at akctrust@yahoo.uk and we will work out cost including Airmail.

"FIFTEEN MINUTES OF HELL"
The Battle of Lewisham: 13 August 1977

(A diary of events)

By Stephen Maggs

On the 13 August 1977, some 3,000 National Front members and supporters, gathered for a march in the New Cross Road area of Lewisham in London. The march from Clifton Rise to Lewisham High Street was to protest about the increasing numbers of muggings taking place in the area. The Anti-Nazi League supporters gathered in their thousands to stop the NF from entering Lewisham. What followed was violence on a scale not seen before in post war Britain.. The police for the first time having to deploy riot shields.

The NF came under a horrific barrage of bricks, stones, wood,smoke bombs and acid. The Anti-Nazi League claimed victory. Proclaiming that the march had been stopped. But was that the case?

This guide is seen through the eyes of those who marched. An unbaised look at the events leading up to the march, the march itself, and its aftermath.
